Where We've Been, Where We're Going, Three Years Later by Tom Derthick, Local 12 President

In early March of 2020, my first article in the Local 12 Newsletter appeared. In it I wrote:

"What does the future hold? All of us at the AFM and Local 12 would like to expand our Union to more members, more genres of music, more young people. There are a lot of folks who never knew what it was like to live in an America where one in three workers was a union member. A lot of folks think that the Union is an office, some officers, a bureaucracy. It isn't. The Union is its membership. It's you and me. What you want for yourselves, what you are willing to do for yourselves and other musicians, is who we are. Maintaining the CBA's is fine, and a legal obligation, but what we must do always is organize, bring more musicians of all ages and genres into our Local, spread our solidarity."

So much has happened since then. A pandemic. 25% of our membership left the Local. Millions of dollars of work vanished. The Local became virtual, giving up our physical office, and officers (myself included) gave up nearly a year of salary.

Things turned around. We achieved hundreds of thousands of pandemic grant dollars and unemployment dollars for members. We raised nearly $20K in relief funds for members. We bargained PPP payouts, contract extensions, digital seasons, safety protocols. Our membership rebounded and surpassed where we were in 2020. We've bargained four new contracts, with two more in progress.

After all that, the paragraph above from my first newsletter as President remains foremost in my mind.

Our business has changed so much since I joined this Local, 42 years ago. The grandkids of casual musicians who were most of our membership back then do not know who we are, or what our role could be in their careers. We cannot be their grandparents' AFM. The "kids" need something different.

Musicians as entrepreneurs producing their own shows, rather than waiting for a club to call. Tik Tok and YouTube. Post-pandemic, even more of the traditional casual musician employment we enjoyed before has eroded. Fewer venues, private parties, more technological displacement. Musicians taking on even more of the risk in self-promoting events, or being paid the same or less if hired traditionally. COVID safety concerns. Except for musicians working under our agreements, no one working under the social safety net of Unemployment Insurance, Workers Comp, Disability, Social Security or Medicare.

As I wrote back in March 2020, I still want to have that conversation with musicians who are not our members. How are their careers going? New challenges, new solutions? Do they feel any relationship with their peers, any obligation to them as fellow professionals? What can we all do together to help?

While we do provide services (pension fund, referral service, payroll service, contract protection—if you file a contract), and while we do have legal obligations as a labor union to the federal government and to members under our negotiated agreements, we no longer serve as part of a cartel with club owners controlling the employment, wages and conditions of freelance musicians. That business is mostly gone. The "kids" operate in a different world today.

The "Union" is still its membership. We won't be the service model, the cartel partner pre-1978. The new model will be what members make it. What the "kids" will make it in the future.

Association. Advocacy. Networking. Having each other's backs. We're listening.

ROPA Conference Report

by Caitlin McSherry, Fresno Philharmonic ROPA delegate

This year the ROPA conference was hosted by Local 7 in Orange County, California. In addition to many interesting presentations (which I have summarized below), we heard general organization updates from AFM president Ray Hair, ICSOM Chairperson Meredith Snow, OCSOM President Robert Frazer, TMA President Heather Boehm, RMA president Marc Sazer, AFM SSD President Rochelle Skolnick and State Senator Josh Newman.

KeyComp Software, Heather Boehm, President TMA (Theater Musicians Association) KeyComp software enables keyboardists to play pre-recorded instrumental parts in time with a conductor while the pitch remains stable. Using “time stretch” technology, it links the pre-recorded parts to the keyboard allowing for real time performance, and gives the effect of a full live orchestra. Keycomp bills itself as the “best live music” and allows productions to realize full orchestrations with a fraction of the instrumentation. For example, a show of Lion King on Broadway would have used 24 musicians in the pit, would have previously toured with 19 players, but now in using KeyComp only needs 10 players having eliminated the need for strings, most winds and all brass players.

KeyComp had previously only been used by Disney productions, but this year it has become commercially available to other producers. As a result it is now getting heavily used in many productions around the country and we can now expect to hear and see it in most traveling show productions. The main point of this presentation was to bring awareness of this technology so that organizations can protect the work of local musicians for these touring productions. Many organizations and venues are starting to include language in their contracts to preserve the number of live musicians required for shows to accomplish this.

Contract Action Team, Marc Sazer, President, RMA (Recording Musicians Association) Marc Sazer along with members of his team gave a talk on their current efforts to get fair pay in the form of streaming residuals for recording musicians through their campaign Fair Share for Musicians. Not only would this benefit the recording musicians, but could also be transformational for the AFM since a percentage of all these residuals would be going to the collective pension fund.

ROPA EDI Workgroup, Alana Wessing This committee focuses on equity, diversity and inclusion in ROPA orchestras. It was formed in 2020 and their goal is to have a representative from every organization within ROPA. If anyone is interested in getting involved please contact alana.drums@gmail.com.

AFM Diversity Committee, Alfonso Pollard, AFM Diversity This committee has been working to help implement I.D.E.A. or inclusivity, diversity, equity and accessibility throughout the AFM. They have been working with the AFM to develop I.D.E.A. training and have created a checklist that outlines these guidelines which can be used throughout the AFM member organizations. They have also created a fund bank available to those presenting Juneteenth celebrations.

Electronic Media Guarantees (EMG), Debbie Newmark, AFM Director of Symphonic Electronic Media This is a media bank used to pay for media projects either paid on top of wages or carved out from the existing wage scale. EMGs are typically only used in larger weekly-scale orchestras (rather than per-service organizations), but the use of EMGs in ROPA orchestras has recently come up in some negotiations. This is not a good option for per-service orchestras, because it either reduces the overall wages for musicians or involves complicated bookkeeping that is an administrative burden on management. It will always be a better option for ROPA orchestras to just pay an additional amount to musicians for any electronic media project than to set up an EMG.

Improving Union Density in your Bargaining Unit, Rochelle Skolnick, Director of AFM Symphonic Services Division (SSD) This talk covered a variety of ways to reach out to musicians not in the AFM in aims to boost new union membership. This is especially relevant now since many union members were lost during the pandemic. There were suggestions of various ways to make new members feel welcome and included in the workplace, and to also show how being a part of the union gives them a voice within the organization. Another idea was to compile and share a labor history of the organization to highlight the gains made over the years through collective bargaining as a way to show how much has been achieved because of the union. SSD provides training in methods of boosting union membership and is happy to work with any organization in creating an effective internal organizing campaign.

Bargaining in the Wake of the Dobbs Decision, Rochelle Skolnick In addition to an overview of the recent Dobbs decision, this talk covered ways to provide protections for employees through collective bargaining from the changes affected by Dobbs. Suggestions included; familiarize oneself with how you may be affected, offer various options of health insurance, grant leave time on short notice, protect medical privacy rights, and ensure protections against employee discrimination.

Reclassification of Pernambuco Wood, Alfonso Pollard, AFM Legislative and Political Director Earlier this year, the country of Brazil requested to CITES (Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Fauna and Flora) that Pernambuco wood be reclassified to try and limit the illegal trade and to promote conservation of the species. This reclassification would mandate permits for any international movement and commercial trade to prove the provenance of the wood to ensure that it was obtained legally. Pernambuco wood is the main wood used in bows for string instruments and therefore this reclassification could have a great impact on the musical world community. Many organizations from around the world are currently involved in finding an alternative way to promote the conservation of Pernambuco without the need to reclassify. A decision will be made this November at the CoP 19 in Panama, and the AFM will be sending a delegation.

“It was exciting and very gratifying to see the greater diversity of musicians in the orchestra for the Modesto Symphony’s May concerts. It’s the first time I’ve played with three other black musicians - to make a grand total of four - in my thirty years as principal oboe. It was also a rare, if unique, occasion for the other musicians and we felt compelled to document it in this photograph.

Thank you to Personnel Manager Matthew Oshida and the Modesto Symphony for hiring these fine musicians and for achieving an all too unusual level of diversity in the personnel.”
